Stay well,
Georgia

Saturday Morning ENE Get-Togethers

A few ENE members and friends have been meeting on Saturday mornings via Zoom to chat, exchange stories, etc. Please join us for a few minutes or the whole meet-up. We start at 10:30 or so and go until noon or so.

About the Reese Dill Safety Lecture

The 9th Annual Reese Dill Aviation Safety Lectureship Series, held annually by the Aero Club of New England (ACONE), will be moving to an online webinar format this year due to the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic.

In 2012, the Aero Club of New England created the Reese Dill Aviation Safety Lectureship Series to honor Reese and his lifelong commitment to aviation. This webinar event, where renowned professionals in aviation join us for an evening of discussion on aviation safety, is scheduled to take place on Thursday, October 14, 2020, at 5 p.m.

eastern time. Our special guest lecturer this year will be Anthony Brickhouse, Associate Professor of Aerospace and Occupational Safety at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University.

As much as we would love having Mr. Brickhouse and ACONE members and guests all together at the the USS Constitution Museum as we've had for past lectures, limits on large gatherings because of the coronavirus pandemic have just made that impossible this year. We are grateful, however, that Mr. Brickhouse has agreed to join us for an online streaming lecture session where he'll talk about "The Science of Survivability."

This lecture will be hosted by ACONE Advisor and event Co-Chair Paul Diette. ACONE members and guests may attend the webinar for free, by registering via the ACONE website. A recording of the event may also be available online for members after the conclusion of the lecture.
